

THE SOUTHERN CROSS EXPEDITION.

The Man who has Gone Farthest South.

The first man to winter on land within the Antarctic Circle, returning home after long struggles with privation and with cold, and struggling perhaps equally severe against the terrible monotony of an Antarctic winter, might fairly be expected to bear in his appearance some indications of the hardships that he has undergone. But the man who has gone 'farthest south'—Mr. Borchgrevink—as he faced a large and deeply interested audience at the Royal Geographical Society's meeting recently was, in this respect alone, disappointing. He bears no resemblance to the popular ideal of a distinguished explorer—tanned, worn, prematurely aged, perhaps even broken down in health and in nerve. On the contrary, Mr. Borchgrevink looks like an athlete who has been excellently cared for at the hands of a careful trainer—small, well-built, with the energy and movement of a young man, with slight signs of wear and tear, but with a condition written plainly on his face. As he spoke fluently, and without hesitation when he looked up from his paper at the slight signs of wear and tear, but with a condition written plainly on his face. As he spoke fluently, and without hesitation when he looked up from his paper at the slight signs of wear and tear, but with a condition written plainly on his face.

When the Days were Short.

Fortunately, Mr. Borchgrevink said, his companions worked together in perfect harmony, and their life during their isolation was, on the whole, as pleasant as it possibly could be under the circumstances. The two Finns who were with the party proved themselves to be the leader's own expression—'delightful comrades, never idle, and always simple and sincere.' And, when the days began to get short and dark, and each man began to experience an oppressive feeling as if looking at oneself growing old, cheer, and draughts helped to beguile the hours of enforced idleness, and it was a positive relief when a letter of his wife was brought into the world, amidst quite a flourish of excitement. Of the days that he had spent in the Antarctic, Mr. Borchgrevink spoke very highly. Even if they had no other use, he said, they would be invaluable in such an expedition as companions, and in many cases certain dogs and certain men became almost inseparable comrades. These dogs have been left down South, and as the pack increased and multiplied during its stay in Victoria Land, a portion of it at least will be left at home in Antarctic regions, and should be of great service to the next expedition that goes out.

The Winter at an End.

The only breaks in the monotony of the winter occurred when any date arrived that could be made into a festival. Royal birthdays were eagerly welcomed, and always celebrated with the hoisting of the Duke of York's flag; and on Christmas Day the wild forms of dissipation indulged in were—speeches, toasts, and extra portions of biscuits. At last the winter came to an end, and the return of the 'Southern Cross' was looked for. The ice disappeared, but still she did not make her appearance. The possibility of her having been crushed in an ice-floe began to suggest itself; and Mr. Borchgrevink determined to take a precaution in case a few years should pass before a relief expedition arrived, organised a search for penguins' eggs. But when some 4,000 had been found and the 'Southern Cross' arrived.

A landing was effected, Mr. Borchgrevink and Captain Jensen, the commander of the 'Southern Cross,' were nearly carried away by the breaking up of a glacier in giving birth to an iceberg, and the ship went eastward along the hitherto impassable great ice barrier. And at last, on February 16th, she reached the extreme southern point of her voyage, and Mr. Borchgrevink took to his sleds once more. Going almost due north in the course of a day's travelling he reached 78 deg. 30 min. 'farthest south'—and then returned to the 'Southern Cross,' and the homeward journey was commenced.

The Value of the Expedition.

The work of the expedition has been well done, and is likely to be of great utility. Geographically the result attained is interesting. The magnetic observations that have been taken in Victoria Land and beyond the ice barrier must be of great value, since, as Sir Clements Markham pointed out, they extend continuously over a whole year. They corroborate previous conjectures with regard to the position of the magnetic pole, which is now located, 140 E. and the 'Southern Cross,' when she reached England, will be found to be richly laden with the 'specimens' that provided Mr. Borchgrevink with some of his most interesting Antarctic slides—shallow-water corals, strange fish, new and strange insects, birds, shells, specimens of vegetation found 1,000 and 1,800 feet above sea level around Robertson's Bay, and mooses and petrels nests found at almost any level on an altitude in Cook Land. Sir Clements Markham expressed his opinion that valuable results had been obtained, and the best line of investigation followed. He moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Borchgrevink for his paper, to the members of his staff who were present, and to Sir George Newman, and the vote was, of course, given unanimously.

A MINISTER'S GOOD WORK.
I had a severe attack of bilious colic. I got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured, says Rev. A. A. Power, of Enonville, Kan. 'My neighbor, who was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him the next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible state, that they had been running off for some time, and he was almost blind. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and he said, 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose, and told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not feel relief. But he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried.' For Sale by All Dealers, WATKINS & Co., General Agents.
